

Fees schedule for University Hospital Aachen

As of 15/01/2022

Dear patients,

This fees schedule provides you with an overview of the various modes and methods of payment for general and optional medical services of University Hospital Aachen.

With the introduction of a fixed fee system in Germany, the general medical services of University Hospital Aachen are predominately settled by means of diagnosis-related groups (DRGs). To all full- and semi-inpatient fees, there will also be a daily care fee on the personnel costs of staff directly responsible for patient care. Furthermore, there are additional fees, lump sums and other surcharges that may affect remuneration depending on the individual method and duration of treatment.

The total of costs resulting from received general and optional hospital services may represent a considerable financial burden. This particularly applies to self-pay patients. Please verify whether or not you are fully covered by insurance for hospital treatment.

If you have any additional queries on details, our staff of the inpatient receptions and the inpatient accountancy will be glad to help you. Moreover, this gives you the opportunity to access the individual legal regulations, agreements and payment policies.

Diagnosis-related groups (DRGs)

Pursuant to § 17 b KHG

The fees for general inpatient and day-patient services of University Hospital Aachen are based on the legal framework of the Hospital Financing Act (Krankenhausfinanzierungsgesetz, KHG) and the Hospital Remuneration Act (Krankenhausentgeltgesetz, KHEntgG), as amended. In accordance, all general medical services are remunerated by means of diagnosis-related groups. In conformance with the DRG system, payable remuneration is subject to the individual circumstances of the case of treatment.

Allocation to a DRG is made via several parameters. In this regard, the main diagnosis and possibly necessary procedures (surgery, complicated diagnostic or therapeutic services) are the most important criteria. Furthermore, present side diagnoses may influence the classification of severity, and factors such as age and way of discharge (e.g. transfer to another hospital) may affect the allocation to a DRG. For this reason, it is difficult to predict which DRG will ultimately be selected for remuneration with respect to your case history. Therefore, the diagnosis at the end of your inpatient stay and the specific diagnostic and therapeutic services that were performed in the course of the treatment period are decisive.

Each DRG is classified according to a corresponding specific weight, which may vary annually within system maintenance. A base rate expressed in euro is allocated to this relative weight. The current national base rate amounts to 3.825,28 € and is also subject to annual change. Provided that the DRG-specific length of stay is complied with, the fee for a case of treatment results from the multiplication of relative weight and base rate.

Diagnosis-related group inpatient

Please see attachment A to find the detailed DRG fees schedule for inpatient services containing specifications on fees as well as on additions and deductions in conformance with the DRG-specific medium, minimum and maximum length of stay limits.

The additions and deductions mandated pursuant to § 1 and 3 of DRG Agreement 2022 (FPV 2022) are made when the lengths of stay fall below or above the defined duration. If the length of stay of non-transferred patients is shorter than the specified minimum length of stay (column 7), a daily deduction (column 9) for the day stated in the DRG fees schedule and each additional day of hospitalisation that was not taken is made. If the maximum length of stay (column 10) is exceeded, an additional day-based fee (column 12) is charged for the day stated in the DRG fees schedule and for each additional day of hospitalisation. In the event of a transfer to or from another hospital, a day-based deduction (column 14) is made, provided that the actual length of stay is shorter than the medium length of stay (column 5) stated in the DRG fees schedule. The individual additions and deductions result from multiplying the evaluation relations defined for the corresponding lengths of stay with the base rate.

Furthermore, DRG case-based lump sums individually agreed by hospitals may arise. Please see attachment B for these DRGs.
